

Aberystwyth University provides a transformative education, encouraging students to make the most of their time there both academically, and through the many extra-curricular activities on offer, both on campus and off it.

Aberystwyth was named University of the Year for Teaching Quality in both 2018 and 2019, and awarded Welsh University of the Year in 2020. They were selected for these prestigious titles by The Times and Sunday Times Good University Guide, and Aberystwyth University consistently tops satisfaction tables. Additionally, Aberystwyth University is classified as being in the "elite top 1000" universities according to Times Higher Education's World University Rankings 2018, and are also one of the UK's top 100 employers for inclusivity in the workplace.

The university is located in the idyllic countryside on the stunning Welsh coast. From spectacular beaches to jaw-dropping mountain-scapes, Aberystwyth is one of the UK's top sites for natural beauty.

Popular Subjects

Aberystwyth University offer a variety of excellent courses across 33 academic departments, but they are perhaps best known for their Institute of Biological Sciences (IBERS), Geography and Animal Sciences departments, all of which regularly make the news for their research initiatives. One recent news story includes how findings by an international team of scientists studying life on the surface of glaciers in the Arctic and Alps are changing our understanding of how viruses develop.

Work Experience

97% of Aberystwyth graduates are working in a related role to their degree scheme 6 months after graduating. Many degree schemes include an Industry year, where students are given paid work placements. If degree schemes do not include an Industry year, students are still able to gain work experience over the duration of their time at university. There are also some excellent opportunities to take part in field trips all across the globe, as well as the opportunity to work abroad.
